Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

By default, a load balancer routes each request independently to the registered instance with the smallest load.

However, you can use the sticky session feature (also known as session affinity), which enables the load balancer to bind a user's session to a specific instance. This ensures that all requests from the user during the session are sent to the same instance.

NEW QUESTION: 2

Multiple providers can be declared within a single Terraform configuration file.

A. False

B. True

Answer: B

Explanation:

You can optionally define multiple configurations for the same provider, and select which one to use on a per-resource or per-module basis. The primary reason for this is to support multiple regions for a cloud platform; other examples include targeting multiple Docker hosts, multiple Consul hosts, etc. To include multiple configurations for a given provider, include multiple provider blocks with the same provider name, but set the alias meta-argument to an alias name to use for each additional configuration.

For Example

```
The default provider configuration
```

```
provider "aws" {
  region = "us-east-1"
}
```

```
Additional provider configuration for west coast region
```

```
provider "aws" {
  alias = "west"
  region = "us-west-2"
```

The provider block without alias set is known as the default provider configuration. When alias is set, it creates an additional provider configuration. For providers that have no required configuration arguments, the implied empty configuration is considered to be the default provider configuration.
