Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

If the native vlan is 1:

A STP BPDU for VLAN 1 will be sent untagged to MAC 0180.c200.0000 (this is the common spanning tree) A PVST+ BPDU for VLAN 1 will be sent untagged to MAC 0100.0ccc.cccd A PVST+ BPDU for all other vlans will be sent with a 802.1Q tag to MAC 0100.0ccc.cccd (with a PVID = to the VLAN) If the native vlan is not 1:

A STP BPDU for VLAN 1 will be sent untagged (on the native vlan) to MAC 0180.c200.0000 (this is the common spanning tree) A PVST+ BPDU for VLAN1 will be sent with a 802.1Q tag to MAC 0100.0ccc.cccd (with a PVID=1) A PVST+ BPDU for the native vlan will be sent untagged to MAC 0100.0ccc.cccd (with a PVID= native vlan) A PVST+ BPDU for all other vlans will be sent with a 802.1Q tag to MAC 0100.0ccc.cccd (with a PVID = to the VLAN)

NEW QUESTION: 3

A call-back system requires that a user with an id and password call a remote server through a dial-up line, then the server disconnects and:

- A. dials back to the user machine based on the user id and password using a telephone number provided by the user during this connection.
- B. waits for a redial back from the user machine for reconfirmation and then verifies the user id and password using the sender's database.
- C. dials back to the user machine based on the user id and password using a telephone number from its database.
- D. waits for a redial back from the user machine for reconfirmation and then verifies the user id and password using its database.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

A call-back system in a net centric environment would mean that a user with an id and password calls a remote server through a dial-up line first, and then the server disconnects and dials back to the user machine based on the user id and password using a telephone number from its database. Although the server can depend upon its own database, it cannot know the authenticity of the dialer when the user dials again. The server cannot depend upon the sender's database to dial back as the same could be manipulated.

NEW QUESTION: 4

You have completed configuring a zone named dbzone on your Solaris 11 server. The configuration is as following:

The global zone displays the following network information:

The zone has never been booted. Which three options correctly describe this zone?

- A. It is a sparse root zone.
- B. The zone uses a virtual network interface.
- C. The zone shares the network interface with the host.
- D. The host id is the same as the global zone.
- E. The IP address of the zone is 10.0.2.18.
- F. It is an immutable zone.
- G. It is a whole root zone.
- H. It is a native zone.

Answer: C,D,F

Explanation:

C: Immutable Zones provide read-only file system profiles for solaris non-global zones.

Note that ip-type: exclusive: Starting with OpenSolaris build 37 and Oracle Solaris 10 8/07, a default zone can be configured as an "exclusive-IP zone" which gives it exclusive access to the NIC(s) that the zone has been assigned. Applications in such a zone can communicate directly with the NIC(s) available to the zone.

Note on zones: After installing Oracle Solaris on a system, but before creating any zones, all processes run in the global zone. After you create a zone, it has processes that are associated with that zone and no other zone. Any process created by a process in a non-global zone is also associated with that non-global zone.

Any zone which is not the global zone is called a non-global zone. Most people call non-global zones simply "zones." Some people call them "local zones" but this is discouraged.

The default native zone file system model on Oracle Solaris 10 is called "sparse-root." This model emphasizes efficiency and security at the cost of some configuration flexibility.

Sparse-root zones optimize physical memory and disk space usage by sharing some directories, like /usr and /lib.

Sparse-root zones have their own private file areas for directories like /etc and /var. Whole-root zones increase configuration flexibility but increase resource usage. They do not use shared file systems for /usr, /lib, and a few others. There is no supported way to convert an existing sparse-root zone to a whole-root zone. Creating a new zone is required.
