By using File Server Resource Manager (FSRM) to create a quota for a volume or folder, you can limit the disk space that is allocated for it. The quota limit applies to the entire folder subtree.

You can create either a hard quota or a soft quota:

A hard quota prevents users from saving files after the space limit is reached and generates notifications when the volume of data reaches each configured threshold.

A soft quota does not enforce the quota limit but generates all configured notifications.
