NEW QUESTION: 1

Refer to the exhibit.

R1 is not learning about the 172.16.10.0 subnet from the BGP neighbor R2 (209.165.202.130). What can be done so that R1 will learn about this network?

- A. Disable auto-summary on R1.
- B. Subnet information cannot be passed between IBGP peers.
- C. Configure an explicit network command for the 172.16.10.0 subnet on R2.
- D. Disable auto-summary on R2.

Answer: C

Explanation:

By default, BGP does not accept subnets redistributed from IGP. To advertise and carry subnet routes in BGP, use an explicit network command or the no auto-summary command. If you disable auto-summarization and have not entered a network command, you will not advertise network routes for networks with subnet routes unless they contain a summary route.

What are the two types of Repository Variables?

- A. Static
- B. System
- C. Dynamic
- D. Non System

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

There are static and dynamic repository variables.

Note:

Variables in the Oracle BI Server can be either repository or session variables, and are defined using the Variable Manager within the Oracle BI Administrator (Manage > Variables).

This brings up the Variable Manager, that divides variables out into repository and session variables, with a further subdivision into static and dynamic repository ones and system and non-system session ones. You can also define variables at the Presentation Server level, these are scoped to individual dashboards and are used amongst other things for setting dashboard prompt values and integrating the dashboard with BI Publisher parameters. Here's a screenshot of a typical Variable Manager screen.
